for the great land-owners to forsake their estates and live at Tower Hill or Shoe lane, with a following of a hundred or two of gentlemen in livery of white frieze lined with crimson taffetas, and to spend two or three times their yearly income in a merry life of dancing, card-playing and hunting in Gray's-inn-helds, Islington and Highgate, and in buying dresses fine enough to adorn court pageants and processions where the greatest nobles of the land accepted the honor of bearing the queen's litter. The country noble and gentlemen of the time of Edward IV and Henry VII had other business and other ambitions. He was not, indeed, a housekeeping man; he turned from a visit to friends and relatives | had to be away at the French wars, or fighting on the Scotch border, or leading levies hither and thither to put down a rebellion or set one going, or to make a raid anapolis, is in the city visiting her parents, James McCrea and wife....Warren Hanna, formerly a well-known citizen of Wabash, but recently residing in Chicago, will return here next week....The presentation of the "Deestrict Skule," by the Woman's Li-Booty was to be had in France, even in Scotland: there was none in London. On the contrary, a journey to the capital need-ed the one thing that nobles and landowners never had-ready money in the purse. If a country lord had to attend Parliament a supply of oats and corn was car-ried for the horses "to save the expenses of his purse;" his wife managed the big bouse hold and estates in the country, and from London an army of servants rode backward and forward continually to fetch pro-visions from fields and ponds, and salting-tubs at home, so that he need never go to

The great oak chests of the country houses were piled up with splendid robes; cloth of gold, figured satin, damask, and silk, and velvets, and fine cloths were heaped together with rich furs of marten and beaver. Sir John Fastoif had thirty-five coverings for his head—hoods of satin, russet and velvet, straw hats, hats of beaver lined with damask, gilt, and the like, to suit his various robes. Gossip about the Duchess of Marlbor-ough and the Duchess of Manchester is natural enough. The society papers and a good share of the daily press have got into a state of more or less excitement over the pecuniary embarrassments which these two distinguished ladies are supposed to endure, and one to read them would suppose that our two American duchesses are actually pinched to a point bordering on starvation. When people speak about the Duke of Marlborough being a panper duke in England they mean that he is not to be classed with very rich dukes like Westminster and Portland. But Marlborough, despite the extravagant life he has led, still has an income estimated at more than $60,-000 a year, and one of his country estates— Blenheim—is the most beautiful and picturesque in all England. He has also a superb house in London. A duchess, with fifteen or twenty servants constantly at her command, whose husband enjoys an income of $60,000 a year and whose own for-tune brings in considerably over $80,000 a year, can scarcely be considered as pinched by want. One, perhaps, may go further and say that if the Duke and Duchess of Mariborough cannot get along comfortably by the aid of a great country estate, four different houses and a joint income ranging in the neighborhood of $130,000 a year, they deserve to suffer. There are a great many perquisites and odd little incomes pouring into the coffers of people of title in England of which the world at large known land of which the world at large knows nothing. Everybody knows, of course about the Duchess of Manchester's husband -formerly Lord Mandeville. It was sup-posed that because Mandeville was always n straits his wife also suffered from extreme poverty, and only a short time ago a London correspondent sent over a sensational story to the effect that Lady Mandeville supported herself by charging a certain fee for introducing American women into society. All of which is rot, pure and simple. Lady Mandeville is exceedingly popular with the family of the late Duke of Manchester. Lord Randolph Churchill has been her stannch supporter throughout her trials, and she is not only on very close terms of personal friendship with the Prince of Wales, but, what is decidedly more significant, with the Princess. Once, when I was in Dublin Castle interviewing Sir Charles West, he showed me some photographs which had recently been taken of the guests at several house-parties throughout England. Among them were three picturing the Princess of Wales and Lady Mandeville, along with the Prince, sitting in an amiable and most affectionate group. Another was a photograph of Lady Mandeville and Princess Maud, of Wales, standing with their arms around each other's waists. These things are significant in

Lady Mandeville always lived in capital style in London. I have seen her driving in Hyde Park with her children in superbly appointed carriages. She attended the opera regularly, entertained people at her house and cut an extensive figure in society in London at the very time that the papers were commiserating with her most violently and offering sympathy on her supposed bankrupt and hungry condition. Our two American Duchesses are clever, bright, beautiful and jolly women, both of them immensely popular in London, but for some reason or other it seems to be the thing here to describe their lives as filled with misery and gloom. Consuelo Yznaga married Lord Mandeville when he was a good deal of a man. He was a fair shot, an all round sportsman, jolly, amiable and reckless. That was twelve years ago. Since that he has gone utterly to the dogs. But it was in no sense the wife's fault.

Mrs. Hamersley in marrying the Duke of Marlborough made an alliance with a man who has been famous in the divorce courts of London and notorious in the world of intrigue for many years. But she did not marry a noodle by any means. Marlborough is reported to be a brainy man in England, but his life of dissipation has had much to do with stultifying his powers. He writes extensively for the magazines and quarter-lies, and, what is more, he writes well. A complete reformation has set in in his life since he married the beautiful American woman who now shares his title. Both our duchesses in England are all right, and we ought to be proud of them.

of the breast," said Mrs. Mollie Walker, of Brinkman street, this city, as she sat in Gun wa's private consultroom on Monday afternoon. "My sufferings from it have been intense," said she, "and the doctors told me that I could not get better of it. They said that I must die or have it cut. I asked my husband what to do and be told me not to do it. he told me not to do it. My brother would not hear of it either. I went to the Medical and Surgical Institute, to a lady doctor, and she said that she could cure me. I took her medicines, but she did me no good. I heard of Gan Wa and decided to give him a trial, although I was told by those who did not believe in him that he could not do me good if the other doctors could not. I went who did not believe in him that he could not do me good if the other doctors could not. I went anyway, and to-day he has cured me with his wonderful medicines. All praise to Gun Wa and his Chineses herbs! I feel as well to-day as I ever did, and if anyone doubts that Gun Wa cannot cure them, send them to me, and I will tell them that he can cure when lots of other doctors could not

"Gun Wa's medicines are easy to take, too and seem to go right to the disease, for I no sooner commenced to take them than I felt better, and to-day I am cured. Oh, my; I feel so glad of it, for I thought I had to die. Gun Wa has given me new life, and I thank him for it. I want all women who are suffering from cancer to try Gun Wa. His medicines are above price. I should have been a miserable woman this day if it had not been for Gun Wa's Chinese medicines, and now I am happy. I shall take pleasure in telling all my friends that I am cured, and I believe that Gun Wa's medicines will cure any disease. They don't taste like other doctors' medicine and they do good where others have failed."

GUN WA is a Chinese physician, who cannot, under the American laws, practice medicine, so he sells prepared Chinese Vegetable Remedies for various diseases. He has been in Indianapolis several months, during which time he has el fected so many remarkable cures that his name will soon be a household word in Indiana.

His suite of parlors are in the second story of 25 West Washington street. Every patient will see Gun Wa privately. No charge for cousultaion, examination or advice.

A friendly chat with Gun Wa costs nothing. I you cannot call on him, send for his circular on cancer, tape-worm, rheumatism, piles, female weakness, catarrb, or his book on nervous dis-
